

Dr. Sophia Vlachou is Specialized in Endocrinology, Diabetes and Metabolism. She has graduated from the Medical School of Patras in Greece. She began her clinical and research medical career at the Department of Menopause and Osteoporosis at “Araitaeio” University Hospital in Athens, where she completed her PhD thesis with a full scholarship by the National Institution of Scholarships. She was also trained at University Hospital of Lausanne in Switzerland in the management of Metabolic Bone Diseases. She completed her medical training in Endocrinology, Diabetes and Metabolism at “Georgios Gennimatas” General Hospital of Athens, one of the biggest hospitals in Greece.

She has written many articles published in peer-review scientific journals and participated in several Greek, European and international scientific meetings.

Her main clinical and research focus lies in disorders of bone metabolism and disorders of calcium and phosphate disorders, with a particular interest in hereditary diseases in the context of genetic syndromes.

Since September 2020, she is an Academic Scholar (Research and Clinical Fellow) at the Medical School in National and Kapodistrian University of Athens and a member of the multidisciplinary team of the Center of Expertise on Rare Endocrine Diseases (C.E.R.E.D) – Disorders of Calcium and Phosphate Metabolism.